Steps to take

22

- During the whole period of SML the employee shall be entitled to special allowance equivalent to the rate of sickness benefit payable in terms of the Social Security Act.

SML Payment

23

- Employee shall remain entitled to all benefits which may accrue to other employees of same class/category
- If given to an employee who is breastfeeding - SML terminated when breastfeeding stops
- If risk for which SML was given no longer exists, then SML terminates

Termination of SML

24

- The employee is to (at the earliest practical time) notify her employer in writing of her intention to avail of SML – the employer must ensure that no risks exist
- The employer must take all reasonable measures to give the employee her previous job back and notify her in writing that she can resume work (once all risks are extinguished)
- The SML shall end 7 days after the notification to return is received by the employee, or if it is earlier, when she returns to work

Mutual Obligations

25

- The employer must transfer the employee to day work if she provides a medical certificate saying she cannot do night work during pregnancy or while breastfeeding for H&S reasons
- If not technically and objectively feasible to not transfer her from night work, the employee shall be given SML

Night Work

26

- During absence due to ML or SML the employee is entitled to ALL rights and benefits that may accrue to other employees of the same class or category of employment
- On return to work she is entitled to the same job or (if not possible for a valid reason) to equivalent or similar work

www.21Academy.education

Termination of Employment

28

Some considerations:

- Probation
- Good & sufficient cause
- Redundancy

www.21Academy.education

Dismissal

29

- If the probationary period has not been exhausted when the employee starts maternity leave:

“Probation is suspended until she is back from maternity leave or incapacity for work (owing to pathological condition arising out of confinement the 5 weeks following the end of maternity leave)”

- SML – probation is also suspended until the employee returns to work

www.21Academy.education

Dismissal - Probation

30

In cases where there is a good and sufficient cause the employer shall:

- Cite duly substantiated grounds for her dismissal in writing in her notice of termination
- Send a copy of such notice to the Director

The reason must be unrelated to the employee's condition. Failure to give written reason or failure to justify the reason will give employee the right to lodge a claim at the Tribunal. If she proves that there was direct/indirect discrimination, the employer needs to prove that there was a good and sufficient cause.

Dismissal – Good & Sufficient Cause

31

If the reason (or, if more than one, the principal reason) for the dismissal is that the employee:

- Refused (or proposed to refuse) to comply with a requirement which the employer imposed (or proposed to impose) in contravention of these regs.

Change of Job
